Concluding an additional investment contract in the app

- 1) Click on the section with your name and contract name at the top of the screen and select Create new investment contract.
- 2) Then select the new investment contract you want to conclude. You may have one or more options to choose from. If you already have any of the contracts concluded, it will not be displayed in the offer again.
- 3) Before concluding an investment contract, you must choose the type of contract you want to conclude.

Explanation/description of each contract type:

The contract for Regular investing (EDI) is used to create a financial reserve for any purpose. You can easily invest and deposit or withdraw money from your investment account flexibly without any restrictions.

The contract for Long-term investment product (DIP) focuses exclusively on the needs of clients who want to secure a decent income in retirement while taking advantage of tax benefits or contributions from the employer.

- 4) Subsequently, go through the entire process of concluding the selected contract or contracts, which will take you a few minutes.

If you have a choice of several types of contracts, you can conclude them all at once.

Depositing money into an investment account

You have successfully concluded another investment contract. Now all you need to do is deposit money into your current investment account linked to the contract and you can start investing. In the Accounts section, click Add funds and choose from the following options to deposit funds: You can use pre-filled one-time or regular payments from your current account and you will be redirected to complete the payment order in your Raiffeisen mobile banking.

Searching investment products

You can use the funds deposited in your investment account for investments. To search for investment products and subsequently buy/sell them, please refer to the separate manual available HERE.
